Alternative Learning for Behavior and Attitude (ALBA) was originally located in the bungalows behind Crawford High School in El Cerrito. The school moved to its current location, which was the former North Park Elementary School campus. ALBA is a program for students who are on suspended expulsion or have exhibited other problems with conduct at their regular high schools. Typically they spend a semester – 18 weeks – at ALBA before returning to their former schools.

At .8-acres, ALBA is the smallest campus in the San Diego Unified School District. The school is located in the heart of the North Park neighborhood, adjacent to the North Park Community Park. It shares property with the North Park Recreational Facility. The school consists of eight permanent buildings and 12 classrooms, including two science rooms. A field and hardcourt area is currently part of a joint use agreement with the City of San Diego.
